PARK SQUARE SOUTH, LEEDS

REFINED WORKSPACE WITH PARKSIDE PRESTIGE

2,223 - 15,214 sq ft

St Paul's House

Perfectly positioned in the heart of Leeds' financial district and overlooking the tranquil Georgian gardens of Park Square,

St Paul's House is one of Leeds' most distinctive office buildings – pairing historic Moorish architecture with newly refurbished workspace behind a striking Grade II* listed façade.

Commissioned in 1878 by textile innovator and civic reformer Sir John Barran, the building was originally conceived as a cloth-cutting warehouse - supporting the rise of Leeds as a centre for ready-made clothing.

Designed in a bold Moorish Revival style, its terracotta façade, arched windows and minaret-like turrets made it an architectural statement of ambition.

That legacy of progress endures today, as the building enters a new era of purpose - re-purposed for the expectations of today's businesses.

A Landmark Restored for the Modern Workplace

St Paul's House has been carefully refurbished to meet the needs of modern occupiers, with interiors influenced by the building's architectural character.

The design brings together high-quality finishes and thoughtful updates throughout - creating a workspace that blends heritage with the quality and efficiency expected in today's best-in-class offices.

St Paul's House is connected to the Leeds Pipe Network, which provides an energy-efficient source of heating and domestic water. The network uses heat generated as a by-product of processing Leeds' non-recyclable waste - delivering a lower carbon energy solution for the building. This contributes to an improved EPC rating and supports the ESG goals of environmentally conscious occupiers.
